

he sends to Mrs. Gray with his love, as an expression in some measure of his surprise & jealousy on discovering that your letter was to me! How sad these family dissensions are.

We are in the full tide of our expecting Teplitz life again. The doctors pulled Mr. Howland down after his holiday much more than they did before but he is getting used to them again. He shall be here a fortnight longer & then hope to have time for a little trip into Holland & perhaps ~~Dresden~~ <sup>Dennmark</sup>, before coming back to Switzerland. I do hope this delay won't interfere with our meeting you. We must keep track of each other, so as not to lose any chance of repeating our charming reunion here, which I hope you all enjoyed as much as we did. Give much love

July reached safely and was duly forwarded to Mrs. Spring at Vienna. We have not heard from her since then but I doubt doubt she received & enjoyed it - as we certainly did. How delightful your little trip into the Engadine must have been in spite of the fatigue but as for as the latter is concerned do you know we have laughed many times at the idea of your considering it a mark of old age that your "breath" should give out in the steepest places above 9000 feet!
Perhaps you have heard through Mrs. Spring of our little trip to Dresden and back. A return Mr. Howland's letter of your arrival. Will you please few days after you left us the Doctor gave Mr. Howland the pleasing information that he must take forty five instead of thirty baths, but softened it with a week's holiday, & we started off at once to spend it in Dresden. You don't know how gay & handsome we found it after Leipzig, or how like children out of school we felt.

We spent part of every day at the Gallery, went to hear Wagner's "Music of the future", drove in the Grosser Garten, bought many photographs of your friend in Kleiner Obersee Strasse & did our duty generally in the right-seeing like. Tell Mrs. Gray that I have not yet had any reason to change my opinion of

"P.S. Rubens, and that Correggio's Holy family with the hampering Madonna & toothless St. John I can't "bear", but that the Holbein
& the Raphael & Titian's Tribute Money were a perpetual delight.
Our visit in Dresden was made still pleasanter by meeting friends - who are also friends of yours I believe - Mr. L. G. Ware & his sisters of Boston & Burlington.
They hope to meet you & Mrs.
Living somewhere this summer as they are to pass a good part of it in Switzerland. In the autumn or early winter Mr. Ware means to run over to Egypt to see Mr. Hall & go up as far as Thebes by Steam, & he was therefore interested in hearing all our mutual experiences. Mr. Howland had a note a day or two ago from Mr. Hall - which by the way
